Presenting

“The HOW and the WHY of Psychological Type: 16 Types from the Outside-In”

Psychological Type via the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI) helps explain personality by looking at how one is energized, how they process information, how they make decisions, and how much structure they are comfortable with. If you know about type – this workshop will show you some fun new ideas. If you're new to the world of type – you will see yourself in a whole new way. Learn how to arrive at an MBTI Type Code without ever using words like extraversion, introversion, sensing, intuition, thinking, feeling, judging, or perceiving! The lenses of “Interaction Styles” and “Temperament” fit together to form the 16 types from the opposite direction of that generated through the MBTI. The method is fun, easy to understand, and applicable to relationships at home, at work, and in life.

Anita Neuer, LPC, is a Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC) and approved Supervising Counselor in private practice in Birmingham, AL, where she utilizes Type in her work with adults, teens, couples, and families. Anita also uses Type in her role as co-owner/consultant with WorkLife Consulting, a firm specializing in the delivery of teambuilding, leadership development, and employee retention services for small to medium-sized organizations. A former Executive Recruiter, she is a skilled career coach and has special interests in women's issues, mentoring, and trauma recovery. Anita is an active member of the Birmingham chapters of American Society for Training and Development and Society for Human Resources Management, and is a Past-President of many organizations, including the AL Association for Psychological Type and the AL Mental Health Counselor's Association.
